Before you drive anywhere with a broken screen, three quick questions can save you time, and they are especially useful for people in Rothwell and Desborough deciding where to take a damaged device. What exactly is wrong, how much of your data is safe, and which of your devices needs attention first? Answer those and the trip to Free Fusion in Corby becomes much more efficient, with fewer surprises at the counter.

Start with the fault. A crack in the glass is easy to spot, but a screen that lights up with coloured lines, flickers, goes black while the phone still rings, or responds to touches you never made may have a deeper problem. Take a photo or video of the symptom if it comes and goes, because intermittent faults can behave perfectly well on the day you bring the phone in. Free diagnosis is available for local customers, so you can get an honest answer on what is wrong before deciding what to do.

Next, protect your data. If the phone still turns on, back it up to iCloud, Google or your computer, and make sure you remember your passcode and account details. Then decide which device matters most. iPhone screen replacement starts from £24.99, iPad screens from £39.99, and we also repair Android handsets including Samsung Galaxy, Google Pixel, Huawei, OnePlus and others. Laptop screens, keyboards, batteries and charging ports for MacBooks and Windows machines are part of the service too, which suits people who rely on a laptop for work. Water damage is another thing to mention at the counter. If the device has been wet, even a while ago, tell us, as moisture can cause display faults that appear days later, and iPhone water damage work starts from £9.99.

Finally, think about timing. Most phone screen repair smartphone screen and battery replacements are done in about an hour at the Corby centre, so a phone can often be repaired while you get on with your day. Larger jobs, such as laptops or devices with liquid damage, may take longer, and we will give you a realistic idea when we see them. We are open weekdays and Saturdays, and a short call beforehand helps us plan for your model. If you cannot get away during the day, think about whether a family member could drop the device in for you, and send them with the passcode and a note about the fault. A postal repair is another option, using Royal Mail or DPD, and it suits anyone who prefers not to travel at all.
