The Brain and Addiction

The brain's reward system plays a crucial role in addiction. When an individual engages in substance use, dopamine levels spike, creating feelings of pleasure. Understanding this mechanism is vital for anyone seeking help or supporting someone in recovery.

Types of Addiction

- Substance Use Disorders (SUDs): These encompass dependencies on drugs like opioids, alcohol, or stimulants.
- Behavioral Addictions: These include compulsive behaviors such as gambling, shopping, or internet usage that can disrupt daily life.
